Background

Businesses supplying surplus food for feed must comply with feed hygiene requirements, such as:

- Food businesses where some of their production or by-products¹ from their processes go for animal feed use;
- Hauliers that transport these or any other animal feed materials;
- Businesses that store, supply or use animal feed materials.

Examples of by-products (feed materials) from the food industry include:

Products derived from any part of a food production that are removed and designated for feed. Any products intended for use as human food but subsequently used in animal feed.

- Bakery products
- Grain by-products
- Confectionery products
- Pasta Products
- Ice-cream
- Dairy products
- Vegetable and fruit matter
- Biscuits
- Pastry products

Requirements:

Registered and approved feed businesses are required to meet standards in respect of facilities, storage, personnel and record-keeping, to ensure both feed safety and product traceability.

- Adequate facilities and equipment including acceptable storage and transportation that is protected from vermin, spoilage and contamination.
- Records relating to the source of the material and its movement within and from a business should be kept to ensure full traceability.

¹By-products are sometimes referred to as co-products.

Legislation

DARD has responsibility for enforcement of all animal feed legislation in Northern Ireland.

The Feed (Hygiene and Enforcement) Regulations (NI) 2005 SR No.546

These provide enforcement powers for Regulation (EC) No.183/2005 which lays down the requirements for feed hygiene and can be accessed from the following link:

http://eur-lex.europa.eu/RECH_naturel.do

Feed hygiene Regulation (EC) No 183/2005 requires the registration or approval by all feed business operators with DARD. To request an application form please contact the number overleaf or visit <http://www.dardni.gov.uk/> and search under 'animal feeds'.

The Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2010 SR No.406

All food businesses supplying surplus food for feed need to be aware of the Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies (TSE) Regulations which prohibit animal protein to be fed to ruminants (e.g. cattle, sheep and goats) and the feeding of processed animal protein to all farmed animals².

Therefore, all businesses supplying surplus food for feed must have controls in place to prevent the presence of animal protein (e.g. meat) in feed.

These regulations can be accessed using the search facility through the following link www.legislation.gov.uk

Farms using fishmeal need to be registered with DARD. For registration please call Scrapie & Trade Implementation on: (028) 9052 5275.

²For specific exceptions consult the legislation.
